

Tile 5: Thomas Delisi and Daile Falconer: Marriage as a Freeing Experience

Thomas Delisi and Daile Falconer on their wedding day, 16 March 2019. Photos courtesy of Alli Falconer at seasonsinart.com

To mark the start of a new journey, Thomas Delisi and Daile Falconer were married at St Mark's. Their wedding, held on Saturday 16 March 2019, was unequivocally them: fun, joyous and laughter-filled.

Thomas and Daile met in 2005. Their connection blossomed immediately and according to Thomas they share a simpatico relationship. Both believe it is not their shared interests, but shared values that kindle their relationship. Both value family and faith as the cornerstones of their life together.

Christianity has, and continues to be, an anchor for the couple. Faith is a moral compass and grounding influence in their common life. Both feel St. Mark's exudes faith and love.

Thomas and Daile remain heavily involved in the St Mark's community. They can be found at St Mark's on a Sunday, where they continue to learn about themselves, each other and Christianity. The church is an integral and celebrated part of their lives.